VANISHING WATERS

We are finally experiencing a few weeks of drier weather. Heavy snowfall and significant rainfall earlier this spring flooded all of our locations. In all our years of quarrying these sites, we have never seen this much water. A couple of weeks ago, conditions improved enough for us to resume extracting the block marble layer for processing into our sawn and blasted products. We were initially cautious about taking orders for products from that layer because we did not know how long It would take the water to recede. With conditions now improving, production is moving ahead at full speed.
